LOUIS VUITTON

Internal Social Media Marketing Brief

Product Launch: Louis Vuitton Terra

Project: Social Media Campaign for the Launch of Louis Vuitton Terra
Brand: Louis Vuitton (LV)
Primary market: Singapore
Proposed launch: September 2027
Campaign duration: 3 months
Indicative campaign budget: S$300,000
Classification: Confidential – Internal Marketing Brief
Disclaimer: This is a fictional marketing scenario developed for educational and training purposes. Louis Vuitton Terra, its specifications and campaign details are invented and are not affiliated with or endorsed by Louis Vuitton.

1. Brand Background

Louis Vuitton is one of the world's most recognised luxury fashion houses, celebrated for its heritage, exceptional craftsmanship, distinctive designs and exclusivity.
As consumer expectations evolve, luxury brands face a growing challenge: maintaining their traditional associations with prestige, aspiration and craftsmanship while responding to increasing awareness of environmental issues.
Louis Vuitton is introducing a fictional new handbag collection, Terra, developed to explore how innovative materials and more responsible production approaches can coexist with the brand's established luxury positioning.
The brand seeks to use social media to introduce Terra to discerning consumers, build desirability and encourage product consideration.

2. Product Overview

Product name: Louis Vuitton Terra
Product category: Women's luxury handbag
Proposed retail price: S$5,800
Product concept:
A contemporary luxury handbag combining Louis Vuitton's signature craftsmanship and design heritage with innovative, lower-impact materials.
Key product attributes:

- Contemporary luxury design reflecting Louis Vuitton's distinctive aesthetic.
- Plant-based leather alternatives and selected recycled materials.
- Carefully considered material sourcing and manufacturing processes.
- Exceptional craftsmanship and durability.
- Repair and restoration services designed to extend the handbag's lifespan.
- Limited initial production to preserve exclusivity.

Availability: An initial allocation of 1,000 handbags for selected Singapore boutiques and eligible online customers.
The product's environmental credentials are hypothetical. All environmental claims must be substantiated before any advertising is published.

3. The Marketing Challenge

Although environmental responsibility is increasingly important to consumers, luxury purchasing decisions continue to be influenced by exclusivity, design, craftsmanship, brand prestige and emotional desirability.
Consumers may also be sceptical of environmental claims made by luxury fashion houses, particularly when such claims are perceived as superficial marketing exercises.
Social media presents an opportunity to tell the Terra story through compelling visual storytelling, product-focused content and meaningful audience engagement.
However, Louis Vuitton must avoid appearing overly promotional, mass-market or preachy about sustainability.
The challenge:
How can Louis Vuitton use social media to create awareness, desirability and consideration for Terra while establishing its environmental credentials without compromising the brand's luxury positioning?

4. Campaign Objectives

The social media campaign must support three objectives.
Objective 1: Build Awareness
Introduce Louis Vuitton Terra to affluent consumers in Singapore.

I drafted the brief from your latest "Marketing Brief" email (29 Oct, from nickgoh@mac.com). It's saved to the Project as `claude/LV_Terra_Marketing_Brief_Draft.md` and ends with 11 open questions.

- Which email I used: the latest message is the Louis Vuitton Terra social media launch brief, which matches the Project's LV brief document. I filled gaps from the Project's brand guide and research dossier.
- The earlier email: the same thread has a 28 Oct message with a different brief (a new home loan product for ages 35–45 in Singapore, income S$65–85k, HDB, 1 car). I didn't use it. Say if you want a separate brief for it.
- Placeholders: anything the email didn't state, such as the budget split and exact dates, is marked [to confirm] rather than invented. The one wording of my own is the single-minded message, marked as an assumption.
- Next step: run the draft through the Brief Validator in a fresh chat before anything is created.

Marketing Brief (Draft) – Louis Vuitton Terra Social Media Launch

Source: email "Marketing Brief" from nickgoh@mac.com, latest message (29 Oct 2026, 00:51 UTC), cross-checked with Project docs (LV Social Media Brief; LV Brand Guide and Campaign Research, Oct 2026). Fictional scenario for educational use; Terra and its specs are invented.

1. Project name

Louis Vuitton Terra: Singapore Social Media Launch Campaign

2. Background and business goal

- LV is introducing Terra, a fictional women's luxury handbag combining LV craftsmanship with plant-based leather alternatives and selected recycled materials.
- Price S$5,800. Initial allocation 1,000 bags for selected Singapore boutiques and eligible online customers. Proposed launch September 2027.
- Business goal: use social media to introduce Terra, build desirability and drive consideration, without becoming promotional, mass-market or preachy about sustainability.
- Challenge: create awareness, desirability and consideration while establishing environmental credentials without compromising luxury positioning.
- Environmental credentials are hypothetical and must be substantiated before any ad is published.

3. Objectives

1. Awareness: introduce Terra to affluent consumers in Singapore. Target: reach at least 1M unique users in the targetable audience.
2. Desirability and engagement: position Terra as aspirational. Targets: 25% video completion on selected short-form assets, 3% minimum engagement rate on selected organic content, 15,000 saves and shares.
3. Consideration: drive qualified visits and boutique interest. Targets: 20,000 qualified visits to the Terra product page, 300 attributable boutique appointment or enquiry actions.
4. Brand health: at least 80% positive or neutral sentiment among classified relevant mentions.

All figures are indicative planning targets from the brief, to be validated against audience size, media costs and baselines.

4. Target audience

- Primary, "The Conscious Luxury Consumer": predominantly women aged 30–50, Singapore-based affluent professionals, entrepreneurs and senior executives; existing or serious prospective luxury buyers. Values craftsmanship, heritage, exclusivity; increasingly conscious of environmental responsibility; sceptical of greenwashing; uses social media for discovery and evaluation, follows credible creators.
- Secondary: affluent consumers aged 25–35 who aspire to own luxury and are interested in contemporary fashion, craftsmanship, innovation and environmental responsibility.

5. Key insight or tension

"I want the things I own to reflect my taste and values. I appreciate products that are beautifully

Used Claude Docs, used artifacts

The revised Terra brief is ready for your review. It's open in the doc, so you can edit it inline or comment.

It covers the three fixes from the validation:

- Success metrics: each metric now has a definition, data source, baseline slot and tracking method.
- Objectives: consideration (boutique enquiries) is the primary objective, with the rest supporting.
- Channels and message: two platforms, Instagram and TikTok, each tied to an objective. The message is now one desirability-led sentence.

Everything I added is marked "(proposal)" or [to confirm], and I invented no budget figures or baselines.

The 1M reach target looks too high for Singapore's affluent, targetable audience, so I've flagged it for restating as a share of the audience.

Section 11 lists six decisions for you and the missing inputs. Once you've settled those, the revised brief should go through the Brief Validator in a fresh chat before any creative work starts.

LV Terra Social Media Launch – Revised Marketing Brief

29 Oct 2026 · @Nick

1. Project name

Louis Vuitton Terra: Singapore Social Media Launch Campaign

Status: revised draft for review. Fictional scenario for educational use; Terra and its specs are invented. Items marked (proposal) are suggested fixes that need your confirmation; items marked [to confirm] are still missing inputs.

2. Background and business goal

The goal is to use social media to introduce Terra and move Singapore's affluent women buyers from awareness to boutique consideration, without becoming promotional, mass-market or preachy.

- LV is introducing Terra, a fictional women's luxury handbag combining LV craftsmanship with plant-based leather alternatives and selected recycled materials.
- Price: S$5,800. Initial allocation: 1,000 bags for selected Singapore boutiques and eligible online customers.
- Proposed launch: September 2027.
- Challenge: build desirability and consideration while establishing environmental credentials without compromising luxury positioning.
- Environmental credentials are hypothetical and must be substantiated and approved before any ad is published.

3. Objectives

The primary objective is consideration, measured by boutique appointments and enquiries (proposal). With only 1,000 bags at S$5,800, qualified interest matters more than raw volume. The other objectives support it.

Priority	Objective	Target
Primary	Consideration: drive qualified visits and boutique interest	300 attributable boutique appointment or enquiry actions; 20,000 qualified visits to the Terra product page
Supporting	Desirability and engagement: position Terra as aspirational	25% video completion on selected short-form assets; 3% minimum engagement rate on selected organic content; 15,000 saves and shares

- Hidden motivation truth (hypothesis): She doesn't want a sustainable bag; she wants a bag she never has to justify. Beauty is the reason to buy, and verified materials are only the permission.
- Big Idea directions: the doc offers three. Nothing to Explain is the stance, The Art of Renewal the visual territory, and Made to Be Kept the proof pillar.
- SOMIN (Luxury workspace, last 90 days to 29 Oct 2026): Louis Vuitton's feed leans on travel and craft, which engage below the set average. It under-uses desire-led and longevity storytelling, and sustainability-type topics appear in 2 of its 210 posts. LV also had no ads in the ads library in the window.
- Caveats: Terra's environmental claims are unverified, and SOMIN shows activity, not motivation. The two attached .avif images arrived empty, so I didn't use them, and I pulled top posts for LV and Chanel only. Competitor material facts and consumer-survey figures come from search snippets I didn't open, so they're marked to verify.

I found the brief in the project docs rather than in the message context.

LV Terra - Research and Strategy Foundation

29 Oct 2026 by @Nick

Summary

- Hidden motivation truth (hypothesis): She does not want a sustainable bag; she wants a bag she never has to justify. Beauty is the reason to buy, verified materials are the permission.
- LV today: 90 days of organic social lean on heritage, travel, sport and art partnerships; sustainability-type topics appear in 2 of 210 posts.
- Ansoff: product development first (a new materials story for existing LV women buyers), market development second (women who pause luxury over values).
- White space: 'made to last' proof and desire-led storytelling, where LV is thin against the competitor set.
- Watch-outs: Terra's green claims are unverified, SOMIN shows activity not motivation, and LV has no paid ads in the window.

Differentiation and key selling points

Plant-based leather alone will not set Terra apart: Hermès and Gucci have both publicly worked on it. What LV can own is craft, scarcity and proof, in that order. Material facts about competitors come from older press snippets that were not opened, so each is marked [to verify].

Brand	Position and tone (evidence)	Material-responsibility signal
Louis Vuitton	Heritage, Art of Travel, icon bags (Speedy, Alma, Neverfull); assured, evocative tone (project brand guide)	LV Pillow (regenerated nylon, recycled polyamide and polyester), Felt Line, Boro Denim, Regeneration 2030; always supporting, never the headline (brand guide)
Hermès	Top of the Singapore handbag market; Kelly and Birkin seen on Orchard Road (resale-platform estimates S$28,000 and S$22,000)	Victoria bag with MycoWorks mushroom-based leather, per older press [to verify current status]
Chanel	Ambassador and celebrity-led; Classic estimated at S$10,200 (resale-platform estimate)	Pineapple leather in some collections, per older press [to verify]
Gucci	Highest engagement per post in the set (see SOMIN section)	Demetra, stated at launch as over 77% plant-based raw materials; footwear first, per older press [to verify]
Prada	Nylon heritage; 24 ads in the window	Re-Nylon regenerated nylon, per older press [to verify]
Dior	Most active organic poster (442 posts); Diorama	None found in this research [to verify]

Messaging Hierarchy

hi claude, run the skill /messaging-hierarchy-builder use the word doc titled "LV Terra - Research and Strategy Foundation".

Looked for files, used 5 tools

The messaging hierarchy for Terra is built from your Research and Strategy Foundation, the revised brief and the brand guide. It's saved to the Project as `claude/LV Terra – Messaging Hierarchy.md`.

Core promise: Terra is a Louis Vuitton handbag so beautifully made that you never have to explain it, with considered materials you can quietly stand behind.

Supporting messages

1. "Is this really Louis Vuitton?" Terra is unmistakably LV in design and craft. It is the lead message in every asset.
2. "What is it made of, and can I trust that?" The materials are considered and specific, with one verified fact per asset, never as the headline.
3. "Why this bag, and will it last?" It is a limited allocation of 1,000 bags, made to be kept, and weighted towards weeks 7 to 12.

Call to action: the primary is "Book an appointment to see Terra". The alternative is "Discover Terra", which sends people to the product page.

The file also has proof points under each message, tone notes and a list of claims to verify.

- Inputs not final: the brief is still a revised draft, and the Big Idea is the pairing proposed for discussion (Nothing to Explain, The Art of Renewal, Made to Be Kept). If that pairing changes, message 3 and the core promise should be revisited.
- Claims still unsupported: Terra's material components, percentages and certifications, durability and resale value, and the design details are all marked [to verify]. I did not invent any of them.
- LV Pillow figure: the "up to 90%" material figure comes from press coverage, so it should not be reused for Terra.

The next step is to get the material claims and their approver confirmed, so messages 2 and 3 can carry real proof points.

LV Terra: Messaging Hierarchy

29 Oct 2026. Fictional scenario for educational use. Working wording only, none of it is an official LV line.

Inputs used: LV Terra Research and Strategy Foundation (29 Oct 2026); LV Terra Social Media Launch, Revised Marketing Brief (29 Oct 2026); Louis Vuitton Brand Guide and Campaign Research (28 Oct 2026).

Status of inputs: the brief is a revised draft with decisions still open, and the Big Idea is a working pairing "for discussion" (Nothing to Explain as stance, The Art of Renewal as visual territory, Made to Be Kept as proof pillar). This hierarchy follows that pairing. If the pairing changes, the core promise and message 3 should be revisited.

1. Core promise

Terra is a Louis Vuitton handbag so beautifully made that you never have to explain it, with considered materials you can quietly stand behind.

Logic: desirability leads, craft supports, materials are the permission (hidden motivation truth: "a bag she never has to justify"). Consistent with the brief's single-minded message: an object of desire, made with craft and considered materials to last.

2. Supporting message 1: "Is this really Louis Vuitton?"

Terra is unmistakably Louis Vuitton: designed and made with the craft the Maison is known for.

Proof points

- Terra combines LV craftsmanship with plant-based leather alternatives and selected recycled materials (brief).
- LV is a Paris Maison founded in 1854, with trunk-making heritage and savoir-faire at its core (brand guide).
- Recognisable codes: Damier (1888), Monogram (1896) (brand guide). Use only if Terra carries them [to verify].
- A new silhouette and its construction details [to verify: design facts not yet supplied].
- Craft is where LV is strongest and rivals cannot copy: the craftsmanship trait appears in 59.0% of LV posts against 31.5% of the five-brand set (SOMIN, last 90 days; internal planning evidence, not for public copy).

Role: lead message in every asset. Show the object first.

3. Supporting message 2: "What is it made of, and can I trust that?"

Terra's materials are considered and specific, and one verified fact is always enough.

Proof points

- Terra uses plant-based leather alternatives and selected recycled materials (brief).
- Component, percentage and verification method for each claim: [to verify: not yet supplied or approved].

The next step is to get the material claims and their approver confirmed, so messages 2 and 3 can carry real proof points.

Revised messaging hierarchy based on:

The Big Idea followed by how that is applied to Instagram, TikTok, LinkedIn and YouTube.

Saved a document to the project

I've revised the hierarchy so the Big Idea comes first and each platform applies it. It's saved to the Project as `claude/LV Terra – Messaging Hierarchy v2 (Big Idea and Platforms).md`, and the earlier version is untouched.

I took the Big Idea to be the pairing recommended in the research document. If you have a newer Big Idea, tell me and I'll rework it.

- Big Idea: Nothing to Explain is the stance. The Art of Renewal is the visual territory, and Made to Be Kept is the proof pillar for weeks 7 to 12.
- Core promise: unchanged from v1, because it already expressed the Big Idea. The three supporting messages now map one-to-one to those three layers: "Is it really LV?", "What is it made of?" and "Will it last?".
- Instagram: the core platform. It carries messages 1 to 3 across all 12 weeks and the boutique-appointment call to action.
- TikTok: weeks 1 to 6 only. It leads with message 1 plus a material-to-object reveal, aims at the 25 to 35 audience, and sends people to the product page.
- LinkedIn: a quiet, milestone-led platform for the senior-professional persona. It leads with craft and keeping a considered object for years.
- YouTube: Shorts for reach, plus one longer craft film that carries the full material and longevity story.

The brief only activates Instagram and TikTok, with YouTube Shorts held in reserve. LinkedIn isn't in the brief at all. I wrote both as proposals that would need a decision and budget from the S$300,000. The SOMIN data covers only Instagram and TikTok, so I had no baselines to use for LinkedIn or YouTube.

Terra's material facts, durability and resale claims are still unapproved, so every proof point is marked [to verify]. The file also has a phase-by-platform grid and a list of decisions needed.

Do you want LinkedIn and YouTube added to the plan, or kept as options?

LV Terra: Messaging Hierarchy v2

Big Idea first, then applied to Instagram, TikTok, LinkedIn and YouTube. 29 Oct 2026. Fictional scenario for educational use. All wording is working copy, not an official LV line.

Inputs: LV Terra Research and Strategy Foundation; Revised Marketing Brief; Louis Vuitton Brand Guide and Campaign Research. Supersedes the earlier version (`claude/LV Terra – Messaging Hierarchy.md`).

Assumption: the Big Idea is the pairing recommended in the research document: Nothing to Explain (strategic stance), The Art of Renewal (visual territory), Made to Be Kept (proof pillar, weeks 7 to 12). It is still "for discussion", so please confirm it.

Platform scope flag: the revised brief activates only Instagram (weeks 1 to 12) and TikTok (weeks 1 to 6), with YouTube Shorts held in reserve. LinkedIn is not in the brief. Sections 6.3 and 6.4 are therefore proposals that need a decision, and they would also need budget from the S$300,000 total [to confirm].

1. The Big Idea

Nothing to Explain.

Terra is desirable so completely that the material story is a footnote she can share if asked, never a speech she has to give. She does not want a sustainable bag; she wants a bag she never has to justify (hidden motivation truth, a hypothesis).

Layer	Role	What it does in the work
Nothing to Explain	Stance (the idea)	Object first. Confidence, restraint, no defensive green headline
The Art of Renewal	Visual territory (how it looks)	Material transformation shown as a striking final object. Craft close-ups, texture, silhouette
Made to Be Kept	Proof pillar (why believe it)	Longevity and care as the luxury argument. Weighted to weeks 7 to 12

Guardrails from the research: The Art of Renewal can drift into an environmental headline, and Made to Be Kept needs tested durability claims. Neither may be used as a claim until approved.

2. Core promise

Terra is a Louis Vuitton handbag so beautifully made that you never have to explain it, with considered materials you can quietly stand behind.

Unchanged in wording from v1, because it already expresses the Big Idea. What changes is how the supporting messages map to the three Big Idea layers.

3. Supporting messages

#	Audience question	Message	Big Idea

Key Visuals

Hi claude, using /kv-concept-builder use the .md file in context label "LV Terra - Messaging Hierarchy v2 (Big Idea and Platforms)" and use Lisa as the brand ambassador (refer to images in context) and use the bag references also in context.

Created a file, read 6 files, and 5 more steps +3

The three KV concepts are written. I'm saving them to your Project now.

Saved LV Terra - KV Concepts v1.md to the project claude/LV Terra - KV Concepts v1.md

I've written three key visual concepts for Terra with Lisa as ambassador, built from the Messaging Hierarchy v2 and the brief. I've saved them to the Project as `claude/LV Terra - KV Concepts v1.md`. They are described in words only, with no images generated.

- Held (Nothing to Explain, weeks 1–3): Lisa stands in quiet, monochrome tailoring, holding the bag by its handle against the cream studio backdrop. There is no caption and no material claim.
- Reassembled (The Art of Renewal, weeks 4–6 and TikTok): panels of indigo denim drift through the air and resolve into the finished bag in her hand. It is the most shareable concept, but also the riskiest on claims and the most expensive to produce.
- Years (Made to Be Kept, weeks 7–12): the same bag at three moments in one Singapore day, ending on the appointment call to action.

I recommend taking Held forward as the master visual. It carries no unverified material claim, so it can be approved fastest and costs the least. Concepts 2 and 3 follow in later phases.

Things to sort out before production:

- Wrong wordmark: the front render of the bag shows a "VERDELUXE" wordmark, which is not an LV mark. It needs retouching out, and no logo lock-up should be invented.
- Material claims: the patchwork denim reads as "reused", but the brief only mentions plant-based leather alternatives and selected recycled materials. No concept states a material until that is verified.
- Existing LV imagery: I avoided recreating the official image of Lisa in denim on trunks. The denim patchwork also sits close to LV's own Boro Landscape Denim.
- Lisa as a real person: she is a real LV ambassador, so the concepts must not imply endorsement. I wouldn't generate or composite her likeness for anything that leaves the team.
- Audience fit: she skews towards the 25–35 secondary audience, while the primary audience is women aged 30–50.

Questions for you:

- Is the Big Idea pairing (Nothing to Explain, The Art of Renewal, Made to Be Kept) confirmed? These concepts assume it is, but the hierarchy still marks it "for discussion".
- Should I run the creative-review and governance checks on the concepts next?

Two desert-sunrise key visuals are in the Higgsfield gallery for you to review. I still can't open images from Higgsfield, so I haven't seen them myself.

- Setting: Sahara at sunrise, with rolling golden dunes, rippled sand and a low sun. The light is warm gold and apricot, with long soft shadows and a hazy pale sky.
- Styling: an invented model in a sand-coloured safari-style tailored jacket, wide-leg trousers and tan boots, with no logos. She holds Terra at hip height by its tan handle. The indigo denim should stand out against the warm sand.
- Layout: 4:5 at 2k, with empty sky at the top and right for copy, and no camels or props.

Please check these when you open them:

- The bag matches your renders and the "VERDELUXE" wordmark is absent.
- The face doesn't resemble Lisa or any real person.
- There is no stray text.

One tension to be aware of: LV's brand guide shows travel is a strong brand code, but the SOMIN data shows travel content engages below average. I kept the desert as a quiet backdrop rather than the story, but it shifts away from the studio "Held" concept. If you pick one, I can add the call-to-action and logo-placeholder layouts for the post and story once you attach the downloaded file.

Hi claude, replace the bag in the sahara images with this and replace the model's face with this one. Ensure the lighting is consistent.

Weighing a face swap onto a real person's likeness

I'm not going to do either swap.

Putting Lisa's face on the model is the part I won't do. It would make a realistic image of a real person, a Louis Vuitton ambassador, holding a bag in what looks like an LV campaign. She hasn't agreed to Terra, and the image could easily be taken for real once it leaves your class. A training label doesn't change what the image shows, which is why I held this line earlier too. I'd also avoid face-swapping her in any other tool for the same reason.

I'm also holding off on swapping in that bag. It's a real LV Monogram denim backpack, and the photo is LV's own product shot. Putting it in the desert scene would make the image read as a genuine LV ad, and your brief says not to imply an official LV advertisement. It would also drop Terra, the fictional product the whole campaign is built around.

What I can do is keep the invented model and the Terra bag and adjust the look, so the class still has something strong to work with. For example, I could regenerate the Sahara image with a different invented face, or with the lighting on the model and bag matched more closely. I could also run a version with a clearly fictional ambassador in the same safari styling.

If your class needs to show a real ambassador, the clean route is the labelled slot layouts I made, with Lisa's real photography dropped in by someone who has the rights to use it.

Would you like me to regenerate the Sahara image with an adjusted invented model and tighter lighting?

For the Sahara fashion shoot, I would approach the animation as a luxury fashion film rather than a conventional social media video. Think sophisticated Louis Vuitton editorial photography brought to life: understated movement, captivating eye contact, beautiful desert light and a deliberate emphasis on the denim backpack.

The creative principle is less movement, more presence. We want the model to command attention without appearing to perform for the camera. And crucially, we must preserve her facial identity and the bag's design.

1. My recommended Higgsfield AI tool

Higgsfield Cinema Studio 4.0

My first choice for a multi-shot luxury campaign, with controls for camera movement, optics, lighting and reference consistency.

Open Higgsfield ↗

For a simpler image-to-video workflow, I would use Higgsfield DoP, which lets you upload an existing photograph and apply a cinematic camera-movement preset. Its native clips can be generated at 3 or 5 seconds.

2. Creative direction: Sahara — The Art of Presence

FASHION FILM CONCEPT

Where elegance meets the infinite.

An elegant model stands among the Sahara's golden dunes at sunset. A gentle breeze catches her long, straight black hair. She turns her gaze towards the camera, revealing a quiet confidence. The camera moves closer, allowing the blue denim LV bag to become the visual hero.

Recommended treatment: A 10–15 second final edit composed of three short, cinematic shots, with no dialogue, no abrupt movements and no unnecessary effects.

3. Higgsfield animation prompts

I've structured these as three separate shots. Each can be generated from your existing Sahara photographs and then edited into one film.

Shot 1 — The Gaze 5 seconds

Model-focused · Slow cinematic push-in

Writing

Animate the supplied Sahara fashion photograph into an ultra-realistic luxury fashion campaign film.

The model stands confidently and elegantly on the Sahara dunes at golden hour. The camera performs a very slow, smooth cinematic dolly-in towards her, maintaining the original three-quarter perspective.

A gentle desert breeze moves individual strands of her long, straight black hair naturally. She makes a subtle head adjustment, lifts her chin slightly and establishes a captivating, confident gaze towards the camera. Her expression remains poised, sophisticated and understated.

Preserve the model's exact facial identity, facial proportions, hairstyle and outfit from the reference image. Maintain realistic skin texture, natural blinking and subtle breathing.

The low golden sun creates warm rim lighting along her hair and shoulders. Fine sand particles drift gently through the background. The dunes remain beautifully composed.

Luxury European fashion editorial aesthetic. Photorealistic, elegant, cinematic, 50mm portrait lens, shallow depth of field, natural motion, restrained performance.

No face morphing, no changes to her clothing, no exaggerated expressions, no camera shake, no product distortion, no artificial visual effects.

Ask ChatGPT Medium

Shot 2 — The Signature

5 seconds

Product-focused · Gentle camera slide

Writing

Create an exquisite luxury handbag fashion commercial using the supplied Sahara photograph as the exact visual reference.

Begin with the model standing elegantly in the golden desert, holding the blue denim Louis Vuitton monogram backpack naturally at her side.

The camera makes a very slow, controlled lateral slide while gently moving closer to the handbag, drawing the viewer's attention towards its craftsmanship and detailing.

The model makes a small, natural adjustment to her wrist and fingers while holding the bag. The bag responds with realistic weight, a minimal natural sway and subtle movement of its gold chain hardware.

Preserve the exact bag shape, blue denim material, LV monogram placement, front pockets, gold buckles, handles, stitching and hardware. The handbag must not transform, stretch, rotate unnaturally or change design.

Warm sunset highlights reveal the denim texture and reflect softly from the polished gold details.

High-end luxury product cinematography, sophisticated lighting, tactile material realism, 85mm lens, elegant composition, precise focus on the handbag.

Preserve the model's identity, wardrobe and the original desert location. No added accessories, no logo changes, no unnatural hand anatomy, no exaggerated movements.

Shot 3 — The Final Impression

5 seconds

Campaign hero shot · Gentle pull-back

Writing

Create the closing shot of an exceptionally elegant luxury fashion campaign set in the Sahara desert at sunset.

The model stands majestically among the golden dunes, dressed in her original tailored beige safari-inspired suit and carrying the exact blue denim Louis Vuitton backpack.

She subtly shifts her weight onto one leg, makes a graceful, minimal adjustment to her posture and turns her gaze slightly towards the distant horizon before returning her eyes towards the camera.

Her long, straight black hair moves gently in the desert breeze. Her expression communicates quiet confidence and timeless elegance.

The camera executes a smooth, slow dolly-out, progressively revealing the vast rolling desert dunes while maintaining the model and handbag as the central visual subjects.

The setting sun remains low on the horizon. Warm amber light creates cinematic depth and beautiful natural shadows across the sand.

The final frame holds momentarily on an iconic, beautifully composed full-body fashion portrait.

Ultra-realistic luxury fashion campaign cinematography, 35mm lens, refined colour grading, subtle filmic texture, cinematic naturalism.

Maintain absolute consistency of facial identity, hairstyle, bag design, clothing, proportions and environment. No walking, no dramatic posing, no extra objects, no product changes, no abrupt camera movement.

4. Recommended production settings

4. Recommended production settings

Setting	Recommendation
Format	9:16 for Instagram Reels and Stories
Resolution	1080 × 1920
Duration	3 × 5-second clips
Tempo	Calm, cinematic
Camera	35mm Film or Modern
Lens	Warm Vintage or Clean Sharp
Lighting	Sunset backlighting / Contre-jour
Camera movement	Slow dolly-in, lateral slide, dolly-out
Audio	Add a restrained cinematic instrumental soundtrack in editing

These selections align with Higgsfield's available Cinema Studio cinematography controls, although exact output options depend on the selected model.

5. Additional instructions for consistency

I would add the following as an identity and product-preservation instruction wherever the selected model supports it.

Writing

CRITICAL VISUAL CONSISTENCY:

The woman's face must remain identical to the supplied reference image throughout every frame. Preserve her facial structure, eye shape, lips, nose, jawline, complexion and long, straight black hairstyle with full bangs.

The blue denim Louis Vuitton backpack must remain completely faithful to the supplied product reference. Preserve its dimensions, construction, monogram, stitching, front pockets, metallic hardware and material texture.

No facial identity drift, no hair colour changes, no hand deformation, no extra fingers, no warped monograms, no disappearing straps, no bag redesign, no fabric transformation.

All movement must remain subtle, physically realistic and appropriate for a premium luxury fashion advertisement.

One important point: AI video models cannot guarantee pixel-perfect facial or logo preservation, even with strong instructions. I'd generate a few variations and reject any with distorted bag details before committing to the final edit.

6. How I would direct the final 15-second film

00–05s — The Gaze
A slow push-in draws the audience towards the model's face.

05–10s — The Signature
Cut to a closer angle celebrating the denim bag's craftsmanship.

10–15s — The Final Impression
The camera pulls back, revealing the Sahara and the full silhouette. Hold the final frame.

For the soundtrack, I'd use minimal, atmospheric orchestral music: gentle strings, a subtle rhythmic pulse and a soft crescendo towards the final image. No narration. The visual storytelling should do the heavy lifting.

Choosing the post phase and placeholder copy

Here's the copy for the hero image, using the messaging hierarchy. I've pitched it at Phase 2 (weeks 4 to 6, the reveal), because the bag is fully shown. That phase leads with message 1 and adds at most one material fact. It uses the "Discover Terra" call to action, with no price, allocation or countdown, since those wait for week 7.

Instagram post (4:5 image)

Alt text: A woman in a sand-coloured belted jacket and wide trousers stands on desert dunes at sunset, holding a blue monogram bag with gold buckles and chain straps.

Disclosure: add the paid-partnership label and #ad if a creator or ambassador fronts this post [to confirm].

Instagram Story (9:16 image, 3 frames)

Frame	Visual	On-screen text	Sticker
1	The 9:16 image, no overlay except the text	Nothing to explain.	None
2	Close-up of the bag's buckle and strap detail, cropped from the image or a new shot	Terra. Louis Vuitton craft, since 1854. [Approved material fact]	None
3	The 9:16 image or a clean colour frame	Discover Terra.	Link sticker to the product page, with UTM tags

The text is short on purpose. The object leads, and the material fact appears once, in frame 2, never in the first frame.

Before this goes out

- Material fact: no approved fact exists yet, so the bracketed line must be filled with an approved fact or removed. I have not inferred any material from the image. The bag looks like blue monogram denim, so confirm it matches the Terra spec before any claim sits next to it.
- Heritage line: "refined since 1854" comes from the brand guide, not from Terra's own materials.
- Image status: the images look AI-generated, a[illegible]e brief says not to imply an official LV ad. Check whether a concept or AI label is needed before posting [to confirm].

hi claude, can you run the /creative-review-scorer based on the following instagram story and post (see attached). Please refer to the brief, the research and strategy in the knowledge base. Thanks!

Loading the creative review scorer skill first.

I'll score the Instagram story and post against the approved brief, starting with the scoring method and the project knowledge base.

Updated tasks, used 5 tools

I scored this as two executions: the 3-frame Instagram Story (treated as one sequence) and the feed post. I judged them against the revised brief, the Research and Strategy Foundation, Messaging Hierarchy v2 and KV Concepts v1. The two .avif files in the knowledge base came through empty, so I used the images you pasted.

Frame 2 is the best frame in the whole set: the stitching, hardware and monogram are the proof of craft, and no unverified material claim appears.
- Weakness: The desert-safari setting works against the research. Explorer and travel content is where LV already over-indexes (Explorer 38.1% of LV posts against 11.1% for the set) and where engagement is weakest. The brief says travel should be a backdrop, not the plot, and a sunset dune with a safari jacket is the plot.
- Weakness: Frames 1 and 3 are near-duplicates, so the sequence gives you two beats rather than three. Frame 3 should add something, such as a different crop, a hand on the handle, or the boutique invitation.

- Weakness: The image carries the whole post, and it is a generic luxury-in-the-desert editorial. Nothing in it shows why Terra needs no explanation, so the Big Idea reads as a slogan rather than something you see. The research puts the opportunity in desire-led, personal-style storytelling, and this is aesthetic rather than personal.
- Weakness: It looks unfinished. The hashtag `#[LV ambassador]` and the tag `@LV Ambassador` are still placeholders, and the caption copy is generic enough to sit under any LV bag.
- Suggestion: Make it a carousel. Lead with the [illegible] shot, follow with the craft close-up from the Story, and end on a boutique-appointment frame. The post then does what the Story

Summary

The Story beats the post because it sequences the idea and has a real craft frame, while the post is one pretty but generic image. Both land in the average-to-weak range because neither delivers the brief's desire-led, distinctive story. The setting is the main weakness, and the bag is a second problem. The bag shown (a monogram denim backpack with chain straps) does not match the Terra renders in the project folder (structured top-handle satchel, patchwork denim, leaf clasp, no monogram). That makes it hard to tell which object is being launched.

The one change that lifts both most: move away from the desert-safari scene. Use the "Held" concept from the KV doc (quiet cream backdrop, the actual Terra bag, tight on the seam and leaf clasp) so the idea is visible in the picture rather than only in the headline.

I did not check advertising compliance, since you didn't ask for it. I can produce this as a Word document with the images and scores, or score the three Story frames separately.

- BBH: 6/10
- Ogilvy: 7/10
- McCann: 7/10
- Strength: It's the best idea in either round. The moment just before she opens the bag carries desire and anticipation, and it works as an invitation to see Terra. It also supplies the Lover cue the research says LV under-uses, with no claim and no caption needed.
- Strength: Craft is excellent. The clasp, selvedge stripe, saddle leather and shutter light are all on-model and tactile.
- Weakness: A hand on a lock is a known beauty trope, so it's more refined than surprising. The tight crop clips the left ring and corner guard, and the only copy space is the thin table band at the bottom.
- Suggestion: Pull the canvas out slightly on the left so the whole silhouette survives, and plan the CTA for the table band.

Being polite to AI suddenly feels like a survival strategy 🤖😂

A viral meme jokes that treating ChatGPT and Claude with respect today might pay off if AI ever becomes powerful enough to make decisions on its own.

While there's no evidence that AI remembers politeness as a reason to reward people, the joke reflects a growing mix of humor and concern about how much influence AI could have in the future.
